POSTKARTE

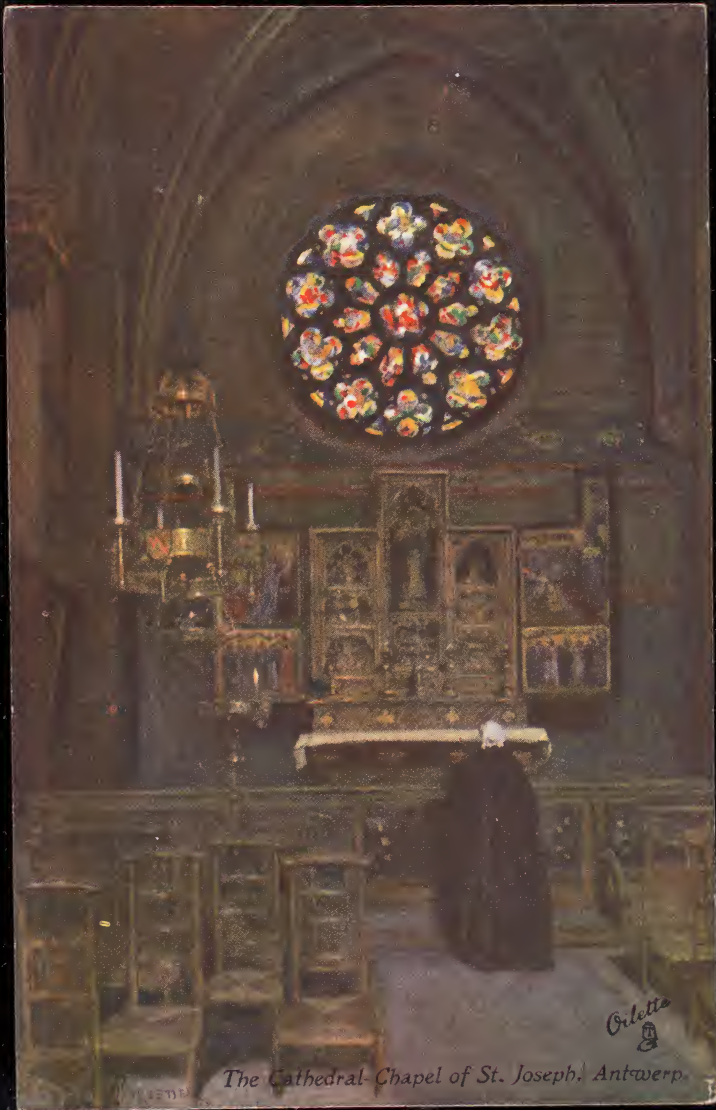

The Cathedral-Chapel of St. Joseph. The Cathedral Church of Notre Dame was the largest and the richest ecclesiastical building in the Netherlands. Antwerp was from an early period one of the chief cities of Brabant, and has seen many great changes. At the beginning of the 19th century, when Napoleon was there, the town was a complete wreck—houses lying in ruins, rivers and canals choked up with rubbish, wharves heaped with old timber, and half the churches broken down (the fine stained glass windows and old ornaments having long since been taken).
